

SEVAL HOCA

Born in London Sidcup in 1987 and she is a native speaker of English Language. She attended Near East College for her secondary education. She received her BA in English Language Teaching at Eastern Mediterranean University in 2008. Following this, she participated in teacher training courses and workshops conducted by Cambridge, Pearson, Oxford, Macmillan and the British Council. Upon completion of these courses and workshops, she attended University of Essex to obtain her MA degree in English Language Teaching and Young Learners. She performed many duties as a teacher and coordinator at İstanbul Technical University and Bahçeşehir Cyprus University both in Preparatory Schools and various faculties and departments of the Universities together with the International Office as the Translation Coordinator. She has taught English at various levels. She is currently working as an Instructor and an Academic Advisor also coordinating ELT internship observation courses at Near East University, Faculty of Education & Faculty of Arts and Sciences departments of English Language Teaching and English Translation and Interpretation.